

ABSTRACT

An apparatus and system for transmitting user data blocks is disclosed. The apparatus and system includes a means for comparing the peak output of a transmission data block to a constant based on the dynamic range of a power amplifier. For any transmission data block that has a peak output greater than the chosen constant the data block is divided into two or more segments. The segments are transmitted individually to a receiver.